Critical Incident Support for High Risk Industries

"Crisis response and intervention is a skill-based system - incorporating the principles of Psychological First Aid - for helping people deal with the traumatic aftermath of a crisis or disaster."

NOVA Community Crisis Response Team Training Manual

The Issue

Employees who witness a critical incident may experience psychological trauma. Hence, when work resumes, these distractions may open the door to subsequent incidents. We need to help them regain their composure and re-focus on the tasks at hand as quickly as possible. Harmony Counselling provides guidance for your employees through such situations to re-establish "normal".

The Benefits

- Employees feel safe & supported & their emotional response lessened.
- Prompt and focused psychological support can help prevent the development of significant longer term reactions. This will also encourage the development of new coping skills to help the individual function more effectively.
- Most employees can quickly re-gain their focus and return to work.
